Dental Implants

Implants are able to support crowns bridges or dentures to replace missing teeth.

Replacement of single missing teeth is by far the most common procedure undertaken by our implant patients. We are of course able to deal with full mouth rehabilitation and restoration of multiple teeth.

Implants are ideal as they are very successful in the long term with 98% successful integration at 10 years. Unlike bridges they do not involve preparation or drilling of otherwise healthy adjacent teeth. They are mostly a permanent fixed solution that does not require removal. They feel very natural and perform just as well as biological teeth.

Periodontal Treatment

A periodontist treats gum disease and it's associated complications.

Gum disease is the loss of bone around teeth. All too often patients present very late with periodontal disease when the teeth are already loose or have moved from loss of bone. The expression "long in the tooth" is an accurate description of what is happening. Rather than the teeth getting longer the bone and therefore gum is receding.

When your dentist advises that you have lost bone from around your teeth it is time to act. Periodontists ensure bone loss is prevented by meticulous tooth cleaning and sometimes surgical procedures to ensure effective cleaning can be continued at home.

As they say prevention is better than a cure. Find out more at www.halfmoondental.com.
